Power of kindness

In a bustling and hustling city, lived a girl named Carlin, who had a heart of stone. She was mean and never helped others in need.

One day, while Carlin was shopping, the lighting system of the shopping mall suddenly ran out of control and all the lights went out. The mall was left in pitch darkness. People ran around like headless chickens, including Carlin.

The mall was enormous and the stores looked similar, finding the way out was just like looking for a needle in a haystack.

Just as Carlin was at her wit's end, she heard a cordial sound, 'Are you alright? Let me lead you out of here.' This undoubtedly felt like a blessing from heaven to Carlin.

With the guidance and encouragement, Carlin soon arrived at the exit.

Carlin then saw the face of the woman who helped her. To Carlin's surprise, the woman was blind!

This knocked Carlin's socks off, she turned over a new leaf. She began to lend a hand to people in need.

Kindness, like ripples in a pond, spreads far beyond the initial act. Although the woman was blind, the light of kindness has enlightened others and illuminated the world.
